

The Age of Aquarius and the BIG Picture Context

The Themes outlined for 2024 through 2029 occurs within the context of the final years associated with dawn of the Age of Aquarius, which is scheduled to technically begin on Winter Solstice 2029.

This dawning period can be traced back to 1920 when the League of Nations was formed, which subsequently evolved in the United Nations. In this regard, WWI occurred just before the dawn when it is said that night is darkest. Since an age consists of an average of 2160 years, equating dawn by ratio to 110 years makes sense, and the calculation aligns precisely with major, historical events.

Understand Aquarius Better

Keywords associated with Aquarius include invention, innovation, futurism, humanism, democracy, social networks, groups, clubs and other friendly affiliations..., and Aquarius is also symbolic of the individual within the collective. It supports both a deep sense of unity, belonging and affiliation, yet with the rigors of non-conformity, at the same time! Critical thinking is the key to this rigor and it can indeed be understood to be a sophisticated skill and even an art. So, laying claim to being a critical thinker may amount to assumption. Scientists and journalists are trained to think critically, yet the possibility of conformity, even among them, due to any number or modes of bias, is the ever-present reality and the key to knowing it implies knowledge.

For example, what is commonly referred to as 'science' is material science and it should be acknowledged as such. To the extent which the term 'science' is solely given to the material world and to empirical perception is a good example of the realities of bias and assumption associated with what has been explained above. As relevant and significant as material science is, it is erroneous to regard it as science with the notion that there are not other kinds of science. Thinking it is so is simply an indication of social conditioning and is actually a form of belief.

The very word bias itself is commonly used, but more commonly, it is not well understood. The fact is that we are all 'guilty' of using words that we do not truly, fully understand. We get by in our communications, but even people speaking the same language often do not in the deeper sense understand what the other is saying. Ironically, despite high level of intelligence and education, people often overlook when, where and how they bias has been socially conditioned, and further extends to a lack of self-reflective awareness, as with personality types. People will assert that they know who they are and they know their own mind, but how well? Upon closer observation, it becomes clear that they do not. This is where the focus becomes political and the emphasis shifts to rights, and on and on it goes.

We should not be made to feel guilty about our actual levels of knowledge and awareness. Yet, genuine integrity and true intelligence includes the awareness of how little we actually know, the humility to acknowledge it, and the sincerity to endeavor to engage in conversations or deliberate educational pursuits ready and willing to expand upon our current level of awareness. This is important on personal levels as well as at collective, societal levels. This attitude altogether, at least indirectly, describes Aquarius.

Aquarius is co-ruled by Saturn, which is its traditional ruler, and Uranus, which is the modern ruler, specific to Western Astrology. Within the scope of this delineation is the theme of common knowledge and common sense, both of which can be understood as associated with Saturn. Upon closer observation, neither common knowledge or common sense are specifics, they are generalizations. While the notion of common sense is often asserted, it remains that it too often leads to debate. So, the influence of Saturn in association with Aquarius refers to the collective, yet without the distinctions of individuality.

Uranus symbolizes alternatives to common sense and knowledge. Words like relativity and paradox describe it well. These words open the doors to critical thinking beyond assumptions. Individuality shines brightly when even a single individual, opposes common knowledge and common sense thinking to illuminate alternatives which can be described as 'uncommon sense'. Words like originality, innovation, invention, and the now commonly used phrase 'thinking out of the box' are more examples of the 'Uranian' mode of thinking.

In this regard, Saturn implies the status quo and Uranus is associated with various degrees of originality, rebellion and subsequently to revolution. Upon reflection, it will be clear that these themes constitute the very fabric of human history. Interestingly, Saturn is often associated with time and tradition, or with time-honored tradition. Yet, it is the very passage of time that produces change, and this is where Uranus again comes to the fore. The very study of Astrology reveals that these dynamics appear to be archetypal. In other words, the very way in which the game board, or life itself, or more specifically on planet Earth, is designed this way.

Time is cyclic. Time is measured by the rotation of our planet, and its orbit around the Sun, which paradoxically is experienced as the Sun's orbit around Earth, and the Moon orbit too. These cycles are broken down to create years, months, days, hours, minutes and seconds. Interestingly, cycles can be accurately depicted as circles, even if they actually occur as elliptical. These time measures might all seem somewhat arbitrary, yet upon closer examination, we discover that a circle is created by 360 units of the exact same size. Not 359 or 361, but 360. Since $6 \times 6 = 36$, we can begin to see why a minute is 60 seconds and an hour has 60 minutes. The 24 hour day reveals 2 and 4, which when added = 6. Although the year cycle is approximately 365.25 days, it remains that the cycle within which this counts exists is based on 360. This breakdown of the measure of time introduces cycles and planets and together these also imply a dynamic process called change.

Where Saturn measures time, its orientation is to tradition and to what can be described as the 'father knows best' status quo. Uranus symbolizes originality, its requirement is change, which generally implies rebellion to tradition and culminates as revolution. Like awareness, acceptance of the reality of change, as opposed to the instinctual desire for the status quo to remain the same, is the key.

Yet, as the game goes, it is the dynamic, social and political process that invariably produces a conflict between the status quo of tradition, along with the benefits associated with it, and the natural necessity of revolutionary change. The flow of change can be observed to be both both steady and incremental and abrupt and sudden, and the study of the synchronicities associated with the cycles of planets provides the opportunity. Within this dynamic of comfortable, familiar and secure flows of tradition, to which most people are naturally inclined, as opposed to the disruptive events often associated with rebellion and revolution, are people seeking wealth, power and advantage and since it is not natural to play the game to lose, but to win, the full spectrum of human psychology comprised of both virtues and vices, comes also into play.

The Age of Aquarius and the Battles for Your Mind

The deeper story regarding the Aquarian Age is the understanding of human psychology. Aquarius is a very political sign and modern politics has become very psychological. A core feature of the Astrological Age is information warfare. It is not new. It includes propaganda and advertising, yet has found its way into the mainstream media. The objective is to control the mainstream narrative so that certain perspectives are deeper 'normal and obvious', yet the core themes of these strategies are not natural, they are deliberate. Historically, these psychological strategies or 'operations', or what have come to be popularly described as 'psyops', of which there are various shades which you will learn if you follow the link, were used against obvious outer 'enemies', yet the game has evolved to levels where the focus is much more decentralized and directed to the masses. Even dismissing such thinking as 'conspiracy theories', is part of the control mechanism.

The motivations include the usual suspects: monopoly, power and control. It may well also include racism and prejudice, but these are kept more secret. The irony is that the key to knowing who is most deeply invested are those who accuse others most strongly about it. This projection factor can be understood as doublespeak. It is just one of many forms of psychological warfare, which is a central feature of propaganda. There are many such terms, and once they are basically understood, they can be much more easily recognized. It happens all the time. While not all politicians or media anchors do it, many have and continue to do so. However, it does appear that enough people have come to recognize it and the tide is turning, but it remains active.

It is less a matter of 'who' specifically, or which networks, but more fully 'that' these tendencies to manipulate and control are features of the human drama, the game of life, as the saying goes... They are generally listed as under the categorized called 'Black Psychology'. Even generally good people can unconsciously lapse into using any one of these. Those who use them deliberately and consistently can be understood to be psychopathic or sociopathic, both of which imply 'psychological imbalances of various degrees that can usually be traced to unresolved trauma, which can literally have its roots in past lives!

The deeper irony is that by understanding these 'tactics' you can even contribute to healing those who are engaged in employing them, not to mention protect yourself and those you care about. Just remember, that anyone can resort to using them under certain circumstances, so do not assume that you are not susceptible at all to employing them, consciously or unconsciously. Survival instincts can be understood to be primitive and we all have them.

Upon closer observation, it becomes clear each of the 25 tactics listed in the Black Psychology article are being used on a daily basis throughout society, and prospectively throughout the world. These can be understood as features of the human condition. By becoming knowledgeable about these manipulations, and identifying them for what they are and when they are used, we can contribute to overcoming them and challenge others to exercise more integrity. It also supports breaking free of the cognitive dissonance that invariably rationalizes these tactics or dismisses any notions that they even exist, which is more prevalent than might be recognized. After all, whether we are consciously aware of these tactics or not, by our lack of awareness we unwittingly enable their continued use and which amounts to our own individual and collective suffering.

The Age of Aquarius and the Human Condition

Many meaningful things are always occurring but we often only really notice when we are focused on doing so, as the nature of our respective, biased, limited selective perceptions. This is true for everyone, so nothing personal. Realizing that you or I or anyone else “do NOT see reality as it is” is the key to being able to more fully see it, ironically. This realization can be more fully appreciated if we consider that life in Earth or in this dimension generally is akin to a school/ In other words, it is a school for souls to learn through many, varied experiences, which invariably requires many incarnations since each personality type, which is an extension of many factors perceives reality much differently. This school model extends to include a wide range of fields of study and subjects and many levels literally from newly born infant to the experiences of very old age and every level in between. This perspective supports a clearer understanding of the many modes of perception and more open discussions.

As it is, most people appear to live in Plato’s cave, as it were, assuming that the shadows cast on the wall of our projected awareness and expectations constitute reality. Even very educated people and those with a so-called high I.Q. whose specializations has come at the expense of considering the many other branches of knowledge, experience and perception. The result is adamant conviction and arrogant superiority whereby any that do not think and perceive and interpret life and reality as we do are regarded as unintelligent or misinformed and so on...

The very reality of the interplay of light and human sight should be enough to understand this fact. This article will serve to establish the basic point. The same can be said of sound. There are many frequencies of sound that we humans cannot hear. Animals often have much better hearing than humans, yet the scope and spectrum of sound waves also far surpasses even the most able listeners by our brethren in the animal kingdom as this article serves to illustrate.

That it is sound which is responsible for the very ordering of the atomic structure of all life and things in the manifest universe is an ancient ‘knowing’ that has yet to be fully appreciated. Even the notion of a Big Bang reveals a metaphorical reference to it, if crude and primitive in terms of its appreciation of the intelligence woven within life. After all, taking for granted that organized and intelligent shape and design within the form of anything, from a molecule to a star, is its own form of colossal assumption. Why a circle, why intricate design, why LAWS?

Beyond the relativity of our so-called assertion of ‘the facts’, where this understanding really gets exciting is when we consider that we are multi-dimensional beings living in a multi-dimensional universe. As is true of radio waves, television channels and other technological realities associated with, bandwidth yet from a more ‘organic’ perspective regarding what can be understood as the ‘natural world’ the other dimensions of ‘reality’ are not elsewhere in the universe, they are here and now, yet shifts of vibrational frequency away.

The glyph for Aquarius is depicted as two wavy lines, one directly above the other. Often erroneously interpreted as water waves alone, associated with the more descriptive title of the Water Bearer. However, this is not the case. The two waves are symbolic of energy, vibration, and frequency. Further, they are also symbolic of duality itself, which from a higher, spiritual perspective is the very result of the deeper realities of energy, vibration, and frequency at multiple levels, and also of the deeper realities and implications of motion. In other words, everything in the universe from the microcosm to the macrocosm is moving very fast indeed. This principle of velocity at every dimensional level is an important feature of the entire equation. For example, what you will learn from this astronomical fact is that Earth's orbital speed averages 29.78 km/second, which equates to 107,208 km/hour. Compare this to the highest velocity rifle bullet which 1422 meters per second, which means that Earth orbits the Sun about 20 times faster than the fastest bullet! This is an example of relativity and paradox combined, both of which are other terms that can be associated with Aquarius.

In these regards, it should be clear how much belief can blind us to other perspectives, possibilities, and realities. Spiritual science and metaphysics are also branches of science in the fuller sense of the word and they include Astrology. It and other less strictly empirical sciences are commonly referred to as 'pseudoscience' by those anchored in materialism, and scientific materialism in particular. Often, people assert their conviction in material science to appear intelligent, but in doing so they simply reveal a biased and limited attitude to anyone who 'sees' beyond their box, because they do not interpret it as a box, but that is indeed what it is: a perceptual box, a paradigm, a unique perspective of reality, but hardly able to encompass reality as a whole, even if they assert that it is does. Of course, this can be true in any discipline. Thus, even those with the most brilliant minds tend to be very adamant with their assertions and can even prove to be the most critical of others, especially those destined to focus on mysticism and metaphysics, thus also revealing hubris and intellectual limitation, ironically.

Among the bigger concerns associated with this large, powerful and contextual background is the inclusion of robotics and A.I. These forms of technology are to be quite expected due to the influences of Aquarius, which is symbolic of technologies of all kinds, especially communication and surveillance technologies, but anything under the heading of engineering where invention and innovation are norms.

There are already reports of events that suggest that these technologies could shift from helping to harming. Many dystopian sci-fi movies are based on this as with movies like The Matrix, Terminator, Elysium and others. These realities are pushing us to be more vigilant to pressure governments to do what it can to intercept momentums heading in this direction. In this regard, we all may be pushed to become at least more politically aware, if not active. So, understanding the timelines associated with this process will prove helpful.

On this note, I am excited to announce that I will be co-hosting a podcast called Aquarius Rising, which begins in early January. The main focus will be on the synchronicities associated with the Age of Aquarius providing contextual insight for our times, reflections on the key turning points, and what we can expect going forward. Among the goals is to help listeners replace potential stress, overwhelm and reaction with awareness, authentic adaptation and personal power.
