

The Seasonal Forecast for 2025

Note: The following timeline outlined below may not unfold as linearly as suggested and the themes could well seem to occur simultaneously, especially during each respective season, yet there are reasons to say that the stages outlined over the course of the year will generally unfold as this predictive outline suggests.

WINTER 2025

All the signs of a major turning point will become increasingly clear in winter 2025, which of course technically begins on Winter Solstice 2024. In tune with the Universal 9-Year that 2025 is, we will experience a strong sense both instinctively and synchronistically as with outer events that gain global attention that modern civilization has collectively arrived at the end of a major, evolutionary juncture.

Generally, people will be challenged to maintain their emotional center, or even make extra efforts to establish one. Faith in renewal, yet acknowledgement of clutter and that enough is enough will merge as a strong attitude among many. What the emphasis is remains to be seen, but challenges to recognize the difference between lofty, armchair idealism and a more genuine and realistic appraisal will become a central theme. Thus any engaged in double speak rhetoric, common among dishonest politicians and mainstream media journalists will be called out and possibly pushed out as well.

Yet, there will also be a strong appeal for forgiveness and compassion, of these apparently victimized by the chaos, confusion and reaction of entire societies at critical junctures and crossroads. Many could feel betrayed and disillusioned, yet challenged to recognize the difference between beliefs and realities. Yet, emotional appeals for humanism will also rise higher than usual.

Others meanwhile will be less sentimental and more inclined to fight for rights and freedoms. So, we can expect popular uprisings and possibly even revolts and violent reaction by those directly victimized by the changes and resistant to them.

As usual, while these events are unfolding, many will simply bear witness from the security of their homes, if also oriented to perceive the world from a higher perspective, surrendered, hopeful, philosophical, and faithful that this too shall pass, knowing all the while that notions of returning to what was deemed normal not so long ago is changing. Of course, to some, this will be regarded as victory.

Spring 2025

Through spring, the emphasis on one hand will shift to many people seeking to assume a more broad-minded and philosophical perspective aspiring to accept what has been and moving forward with idealistic adaptation to forge a better future. Alternately, many will feel that they no longer identify with, subscribe to or belong in and subsequently will reject the new era that is emerging.

This could produce a whole new theme of social divide, many will look to new horizons and greener pastures, thus the global migration process will continue strongly. This impulse could well manifest as new sub-culture networks, co-ops and land shares, and we could see a rise in the volume of tent cities that have become a painful indication of failures of modern society, and/or the consequences of foreign interference and sabotage.

All the while, a wide spectrum of new leaders will come onto the world stage. Existing thought leaders guided by high ideals, visionary fervor and reactive impulses are likely to get more attention. Many new players will assume positions of power based both on popular vote and approval and there will likely be the more renegade types winning to the attention and respect of others contributing to many new networks.

So, spring 2025 stands to be eventful, increasingly dramatic and probably chaotic, rebellious, revolutionary and violent in various locations as well.

Summer 2025

The escalating drama will continue so through summer 2025. Yet, this is not to say it will be all bad. There are many types of people in any society and their values and focuses are different from those of others. So, while some are deeply immersed on strife and conflict, others will be embracing the season for all its worth and uplifting excitements.

Initially especially from solstice and the few weeks following, people may be more inclined to direct their focus on centering themselves and doing whatever level of inner work to which they are inclined. This could be as basic as humble adaptation guided in part by the pressures of practical realities.

Then kicked-off by the respective birthdays in Canada and the USA, there could even be rejoicing and celebration in the streets and summer festivals will be popular and in full swing. People will be ready to reach out more and enjoy the services and entertainments that others have to offer and forming new bonds of friendship.

For various reasons, as August gets underway, the emphasis will again take noticeable turns to more realistic and practical realities. People will be both more challenged and inclined to direct their energies to collective goals requiring cooperative efforts. Realism will replace idealism and jingoism with some of the focus supporting the holistic healing movement which is already and will gain increasing momentum.

Late summer, however could prove more difficult. Perhaps some who feel that the world has moved on without them or that their interests, beliefs and concerns have been dismissed, or that they have been used or betrayed somehow, causing them to feel frustrated, angry and rebellious, and they may lash out in retaliation.

Autumn 2025

While it might not apply to describe the final quarter of the year as peaceful, it may at least achieve a quality of truce. As though humbled by the events leading up to it, perhaps especially in late summer, there are indication that people will want peace and may even be willing to make more sincere efforts to achieve it, if begrudgingly so by some factions.

Among the various possible outcomes will be more divisions of networks and subcultures in society, yet with a willingness to live and let live. So, any groups generally classified as fringe whose voice was louder than most of the populations were interested in hearing will become quieter, while those who were quiet yet are deemed valuable could get more attention.

There are indications that this trend will continue through winter 2026, as well. It includes the progressive dissolution of institutions and organizations that are no longer relevant or which were unable to adapt or destined to end, and the volume of these could even prove to increase and accelerate.
